HEAVY PRESSURE BY JAPANESE IN BURMA

BID TO SHATTER THE CHINESE AT TOUNGOO

JAPANESE bombers are attacking in continuous waves as their ground troops maintain their heavy pressure on the Chinese troops holding on to encircled Toungoo, the key rail town, 220 miles south of Mandalay.

In New Guinea Japanese forces, advancing in considerable strength along the course of the Markham River, have been halted at Mabzab, 27 miles from Lae, the capital, but they now possess fertile flats of undulating valley country, very suitable for airfields.

This may herald the start of large-scale air operations against Port Moresby—subjected yesterday to its twentieth raid—and also against islands in the vital Torres Strait and Allied bases in Northern Queensland. There is no indication at the moment of a Japanese land advance on Port Moresby.

Meanwhile, as Australia took new protective measures in her threatened Northern territory, the appointment of General Sir Thomas Blamey as Commander-in-Chief of the Allied land forces on Commonwealth soil was announced in Canberra. He will work under General Douglas MacArthur.—(Press Association and Reuter.)

CHINESE REINFORCEMENTS

In Burma, success or failure of the present important operations on the Toungoo front, says Reuter's special correspondent, depends largely on Allied air support. The Japanese are undoubtedly out to make a determined bid first to shatter the Chinese troops fighting stubbornly north and south of the town, and then to deal with the Imperial troops. Main Japanese forces are pressing up the road from the south, and the situation is serious, with some of the Chinese units surrounded. But in the north the Japanese themselves are surrounded to some extent, and the issue will turn on the relative speed with which reinforcements can be brought up.

At Mabzab, in New Guinea, the Japanese control a great area of country, capable of providing a dozen aerodromes by the mere cutting of the grass. They have made only one sortie from the valley leading into the wild jungle country, where Australian patrols bar the w to infiltration.

Chinese reinforcements have reached Toungoo, the Chinese communiqué states, according to a Reuter telegram from Chungking. Fighting is in progress in the western, southern and northern outskirts of the town. It was also disclosed that General Alexander, British Commander in Burma, has returned to Burma after a visit to Chungking. General Alexander, the announcement said, had a conference with Marshal Chiang Kai-Shek. In a statement before leaving, General Alexander said he had visited Chungking to inform Marshal Chiang Kai-Shek of the latest military situation in Burma and to make sure the Marshal was satisfied with the arrangements for the provisioning and maintenance of Chinese troops in Burma.

Commenting on the Chinese troops in Burma, General Alexander declared: "I have been impressed with their fitness and toughness. They look happy, they work hard and their behaviour and discipline are excellent."

SITUATION SERIOUS

Although reinforcements have reached Toungoo, the situation there is still serious, the Chinese communiqué states. The Japanese have continued to bring up reinforcements to the Toungoo front, but up to the night of March 24 (Tuesday) the Chinese continued to hold the Japanese in the vicinity of Oktwin and Tantabin, to the south of Toungoo. The Japanese, therefore, moved from the north-west, and a Japanese detachment occupied the airfield to the north of Toungoo at dawn on March 25, with the object of closing in on the Chinese defenders from three directions. "The Chinese liquidated the Japanese detachment at the airfield, and continued to counter-attack Japanese reinforcements arriving there. After the arrival of reinforcements the morale of the Chinese defenders mounted, resulting in the very severe fighting at present in progress. Up to last night Toungoo remained in our hands, with fighting in progress in the western, southern and northern outskirts."—(Reuter.)

A Domei report, broadcast by German Radio, said that the Japanese had cleared the waters around Rangoon of mines, and a Japanese naval squadron had arrived at Rangoon. Japanese gunboats were steaming up the Sittang river, this report said.—(Associated Press.)

General Blamey, Commander-in-Chief Australian forces in the Middle East, has returned to Australia, and has been appointed Commander-in-Chief, Allied land forces in the Commonwealth. He said they must be prepared to expect the danger of invasion. "You have a tough time ahead. I believe the whole nation realises now that total war exists." He described General Smuts as "the Empire's greatest asset." The Libyan campaign was a big achievement, and the position had been stabilised. Rommel was not a good General, though bold. "Talk of the Libyan campaign being unsuccessful is damn silly," he exclaimed.

Major-General Sir Leslie Morshead, defender of Tobruk, has been appointed General Blamey's successor in the Middle East.—(Reuter.)

7 RAIDS IN 24 HOURS

According to a Reuter message from Washington, the Japanese have made seven successive air attacks on Corregidor, island fortress in Manila Bay, in twenty-four hours. The attacks were resumed to-day. Most bombs fell in the bay and Corregidor was little damaged. On Thursday bombing went on almost continuously from early morning until midnight, with a short lull about sunset. In the afternoon and at night the raids decreased in intensity. Anti-aircraft fire is believed to have hit several 'planes.

In the Bataan Peninsula there were a number of sharp clashes between patrols. There were troop and truck movements behind the Japanese lines, which indicated that increased activity may be expected.

"One of our patrols," says an American War Department communiqué, successfully raided a strong enemy position. Japanese dive-bombers attacked our rear areas, but without success."

The communiqué also reports that President Quezon and members of the War Cabinet of the Philippines Commonwealth Government have joined General MacArthur in Australia.

GERMAN 'PLANE LOSSES OVER MALTA

MALTA, Friday.—Seven German 'planes were destroyed in heavy attacks on shipping at Malta yesterday afternoon.

"Two Ju. 88's and one Ju. 87 were destroyed, one Ju. 88 probably destroyed, and one Ju. 87 seriously damaged. Many other Ju. 87's received hits. The day's total, including those destroyed by the R.A.F. were four Ju. 88's and three Ju. 87 dive-bombers destroyed, two Ju. 88's probably destroyed, seven Ju. 88's damaged, one Ju. 87 seriously damaged, three Ju. 87's damaged and other Ju. 87's receiving hits."

A later communiqué said: "German air activity over Malta yesterday (Friday) was on a very restricted scale. There were three bombing raids by a small single formation on each occasion. After a fighter-bomber attack in the morning, three Ju. 88 bombers raided the harbour area. In the afternoon fighter-bombers again attacked. Heavy and light anti-aircraft artillery was in action. One Me. 109 was probably destroyed by the heavy anti-aircraft fire. There was some civilian damage, but no casualties. A raid is still in progress."—(Reuter.)

RENEWED AIR ATTACKS ON RUHR

THIRTEEN BOMBERS MISSING

Industrial objectives in the Ruhr were again heavily attacked by Royal Air Force bombers on Thursday night.

The Air Ministry communiqué stated:—

"Our bombers again attacked the Ruhr in force, and industrial objectives were heavily bombed. Attacks were also made by aircraft of Bomber and Fighter Commands on enemy aerodromes in Holland, on an oil refinery near Ghent, and on the docks at Le Havre. During one of these attacks our fighters destroyed an enemy bomber in air combat.

"Coastal Command aircraft made a low-level bombing attack on an enemy convoy off the Frisian Islands on Thursday afternoon, and scored hits on a medium-sized supply ship.

"From all these operations thirteen of our bombers are missing.

"An enemy bomber was destroyed over this country on Thursday night.

"The Ruhr was very heavily bombed on Wednesday night, when Essen was the main target."

COAST TOWNS RAIDED

German air raiders yesterday afternoon swooped almost simultaneously on two coast towns in the south-west of England. They came over one town from the land side in a "hit and run" attack, dropped bombs, used their guns, and then flew seawards with Hurricane fighters in hot pursuit. Only one casualty has been reported in this part, a man being slightly injured, presumably by machine-gun fire. There was more bombing and gunning at the second town, but no casualties or damage have been reported. Two raiding 'planes were over each town.

Racing as Usual Until April 30th

The Minister for Industry and Commerce met a deputation yesterday consisting of representatives of the Turf Club and the National Hunt Steeplechase Committee. It was decided that no alteration would be made in the existing programmes up to 30th April. Discussions are proceeding as regards the alterations to be made as from the 1st May.

JAPANESE ENVOY TO VATICAN

The appointment of Mr. Ken Harada as special Japanese Minister to the Vatican is officially announced in a Reuter message from Tokyo.

His Excellency Monsignor Paul Marella, Archbishop of Doclea and Apostolic Delegate, who has been in Japan since 1937, will be extended "full diplomatic privileges."

This is the first time that Japan has sent a diplomat to the Vatican.

The Japanese Foreign Office states: "In view of the present world situation, as well as the presence in Greater Asia of numerous adherents of the Roman Catholic Faith, the significance of promoting friendly relations and mutual contact between Japan and the Holy See hardly requires explanation."

The Japanese News Agency quotes the Papal representative in Tokyo as describing the move as "especially timely and appropriate." Emphasising the Vatican's strict neutrality, the Papal representative adds: "Nevertheless, we are not indifferent to the sufferings arising out of international warfare. The Vatican's authority is purely moral; therefore, we are in a position to win the confidence and friendship of Japan."

BANNED

Sir Dawson Bates has banned from April 1 to April 8 all meetings and processions in Northern Ireland in commemoration of the 1916 Rising.

REDS' MURMANSK ATTACK

GAINS ON SMOLENSK FRONT

MOSCOW, Friday.—Extending to the Far North its bid to shatter the German plans for spring campaigning, the Red Army has struck at the rear of the Austrian troops on the Murmansk front.

Soviet troops landing from warships have launched a surprise attack on forces which for several months before winter darkness fell strove to push eastward against the Russian base, into which Allied supplies are flowing in a steady stream. Land, sea and air forces are co-operating in the operation, which, according to Moscow Radio reports quoted by Stockholm, threw the Germans into "great confusion."

On the Smolensk front, General Zhukov's troops, closing on the long narrow neck upon which Vyazma depends for supplies, and daily tightening the ring round Rzhev, have captured ten more strategically-sited villages in the last few days.

Under orders to hold on at all costs to key positions, German reserve units are being flung into desperate counter-attacks, which are involving them in heavy losses. So far, however, they have failed to check the impetus of the Russian troops, who are fortifying each point as they occupy it, and then fighting their way forward.

The German High Command is redoubling its efforts to break through the Soviet ring about the 16th Army at Staraya Russa. General Kurochkin is hitting the encircled troops from north and south, and all German attempts to pierce the Soviet line with reserves from bases far back in the rear have failed.

MOSCOW, Friday.—In a sector of the Southern front, where Soviet troops have been pushing ahead for some days, they have just captured a large populated point by an out-flanking manœuvre. A street battle took place for this point, which was surrounded by anti-tank, anti-infantry defences and minefield.—(Reuter.)

MOSCOW, Friday.—All populated points on the outer ring of the 16th German Army at Staraya Russa have been blocked, and the best German positions in each of these villages have been brought under the range of Soviet fire, so that the garrisons can be used only defensively and not offensively, says a front-line despatch received in Moscow to-night. The systematic wiping out of the German centres of resistance continues. In one battle in which German communications were cut the Germans lost 1,500 men.—(Reuter.)

ROOSEVELT'S ORDER

WASHINGTON, Friday.—The White House has disclosed that President Roosevelt had ordered first priority on shipments of war supplies to Russia, and had told the War Production Board and the Army and Navy to release such supplies as soon as possible.

In a letter to Rear Admiral Emory, Land Director of War Shipping, the President said that he had found "our protocol shipments to Russia still far behind," and that he wished "to emphasise again to you that the meaning of the Russian protocol shall have first priority in shipping." At the same time, the President told Mr. Donald Nelson, War Production Chief, that he wished all material promised to Russia under her protocol agreement with America to be released for shipment at the earliest possible date. Similar instructions had been given to the Army and Navy.—(Associated Press.)

MOSCOW, Friday.—The Soviet communiqué says:—"During March 27 there were no important changes at the front. On March 26 fifteen enemy 'planes were shot down. Our losses were nine 'planes. On March 27 two German 'planes were shot down near Moscow."—(Reuter.)

MOSCOW, Saturday.—A German raid on Moscow last night was reported in a broadcast over Moscow Radio. Anti-aircraft guns were in action.—(Associated Press.)

SLIGO ATTEMPTED MURDER CHARGE

Joseph McSharry (32), Sligo Mental Hospital attendant, was returned for trial to the Central Criminal Court yesterday for attempting to murder Edward Gallagher (52), Springfield, Sligo, a fellow attendant, on 25th February last, by District Justice Flattery.

The District Justice allowed the prisoner out in his own bail of £500, the money to be first lodged in court, and two sureties of £250 each, to be approved of by the Guards. He made a further condition that the accused man was not to leave his home in Kinlough, Co. Leitrim, for a distance more than five miles without notifying the local Gardai.

Evidence was given that a broken cuff link found at the scene of the assault was identical with one worn by the prisoner; that McSharry had been fined by the acting R.M.S. for insubordination, following a complaint from Gallagher, the injured man; that Mrs. Gallagher heard her husband shouting: "I'm a killing; I'm a murdering," and she ran out and tried to grab a man, who turned and ran away, and whom she recognised as McSharry; the finding in McSharry's house of a blood-stained shirt, with part of a sleeve missing, the missing part being found outside the house.

PETROL RESTRICTION HITS TIMBER TRADE

The new petrol and oil restriction would have a paralysing effect on timber production if put fully into effect, said Mr. R. G. H. Russell, President of the Native Timber Merchants' Federation, at a meeting of representatives of the timber trade in Dublin yesterday. Timber could not be bought if there were no petrol for inspection cars, and without lorries and tractors timber could not be extracted from the forests or taken to the mills. He hoped that the Minister for Supplies would not make it impossible to carry on the trade.

The trade, Mr. Russell said, felt great alarm at the attitude of Government departments in granting licences to fell trees to persons who had no knowledge of the timber trade. Valuable commercial timber was being turned into firewood, and there was great wastage.

IRISH DISTRICT ROTARY

The Irish Rotary District Council, which met in the Gresham Hotel, Dublin, yesterday, elected the following officers:—Chairman and international representative, Mr. R. H. Keatinge, O.B.E., Dublin; vice-chairman, Mr. R. V. Hawthorne, Portadown; secretary, Mr. J. H. Norritt, Belfast; treasurer, Mr. W. A. McConnell, O.B.E., Dublin.

HOARDERS HOLDING UP THE GOODS

By a Special Representative.

GOODS that never reach the consumer are a contributory cause of shortages in Eire, a cause that is largely ignored. In many cases goods are bought for hoarding in anticipation of rises in prices, and in such cases they do not pass from hand to hand very frequently.

But there are other classes of goods so eagerly sought by dealers that one buyer no sooner has obtained a consignment than another offers him an attractive price for it. A third buyer buys from the second, and a fourth from the third, each of the buyers holding the goods for some time. The price continues to rise as the shortage becomes more acute for the consumer, and still the goods do not go on the market.

An extreme instance of this was the case in which a young man speculated in a certain class of timber during the last war. He got more than he thought he had bought, and had to hold it for a time before paying for it. At the end of that time he was offered for it twice what it had cost him, and he sold. Subsequently the timber moved from buyer to buyer, and then the price went down in the post-war slump. The same timber is at present in store in Dublin, in perfect condition, and its price is now more than five times what the young man (now middle-aged) paid for it.

BRITISH GUNBOATS IN ACTION

A British Admiralty communiqué yesterday stated:—"Early this morning three of our motor gun-boats, under the command of Lieut. J. D. Maitland, encountered a German armed trawler in the North Sea. The motor gun-boats at once engaged, and the enemy armed trawler was left in flames and sinking. Our motor gun-boats suffered no casualties or damage."

This is the second time in just over a week that motor gun-boats—a secret type of naval craft—have been mentioned in an Admiralty communiqué. Motor gun-boats carry a shell-firing gun. Motor torpedo boats use torpedoes, and motor launches use machine-guns.—(Press Association.)

FRENCH WERE TAKEN BY SURPRISE

VICHY, Friday.—An admission that the German Panzer divisions launched their main blow in May, 1940, at a point where the French High Command had not expected they would attack was made by General Etcheberrigaray at the Riom trial. The General was Commander of the 5th French Division at the time of the German invasion.

"The onslaught of the German armoured units on May 13 and 14 could not be held," he said. "We received the full shock of the attack where we did not expect it. Our troops at this point were without a system of anti-tank defences, but I can say that they conducted themselves quite honourably."

He confirmed that in the bend of the Meuse where the German break-through occurred there were only three reserve divisions, and no first line troops.

When the President of the Court said it would be necessary to examine the commanders who were responsible for placing reserve divisions in this sector M. Daladier interposed: "Yes, for that is one of the main reasons for the turn events took in this war."—(Reuter.)

BICYCLE PRICES ARE SOARING

SECONDHAND bicycles are being sold in Dublin at prices ranging from £5 to £15. Old cranks, sprockets and rusty wheels are being haggled over in the back rooms of secondhand stores.

Are bicycles to be had? Five Dublin cycle merchants said yesterday that they would have none in stock until expected consignments reached them some time in April, but had so many orders on hand that they could not promise delivery even then. A sixth store offered a gentleman's new model for £10; a lady's secondhand for £12.

Empty cycle stores have panicked prospective buyers into a rush on secondhand models. In a room in the north city an Irish Times reporter last night—in the face of five other people who were waving £10 in notes before the seller—paid £10 5s. 0d. for a decrepit light-weight machine. Carrying his prize downstairs over his shoulder, he heard: "That's not fair, Mrs. ——! You know me!" "Aye, I know you, my lad, but the gentleman offered five bob more!"

Allegations of profiteering and unfair dealing are being raised by unsatisfied seekers. "Have the cycle stores got hidden stocks?" they ask. "Are they putting sold labels on those they display and holding them against a price increase?" "What about the hundreds of tyres and tubes which are being bought up at high prices by provincial dealers?"

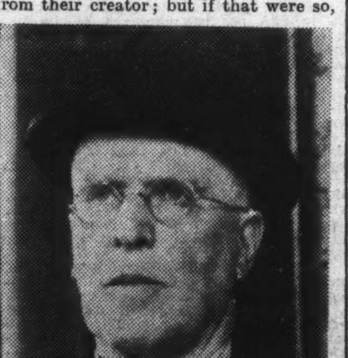
CLOSE OF IRISH BOOK FAIR

VIEWS ON WRITERS

"The novelist pilfers from the historian continually," said Dr. D. A. Chart, speaking on "Recording the Past," at the Book Fair at the Mansion House yesterday. Some novelists, he said, claimed that their characters took on a life of their own, quite apart from their creator; but if that were so, he was afraid those characters rather led them up the garden path. The Greeks had assigned history as one of the nine muses; but novelists could not invoke anybody, as the Greeks had not provided them with a muse at all.



Dr. D. A. Chart.

Stating that history was one of our earliest loves in Ireland, and that Irish historians were becoming less controversialist and more dispassionate, Dr. Chart told of a chronicler writing 1,000 years ago who said that the night was so stormy that he had no fear of any attacks from Norsemen to interrupt him. He compared it to a phrase heard in many parts of the globe to-day when weather was bad: "Thank God they will hardly be over to-night."

Dr. Chart illustrated his lecture by reading from ancient letters, including one written by a prisoner in Kilmainham Bastille in 1797, and another written by a Militiaman in Drogheda, just ordered to Bantry Bay, where the French had landed.

Dr. Eoin MacNéill was in the chair.

ULSTER WRITERS

"Literature is the most important function carried out in a State," said Mr. Denis Ireland, addressing the Book Fair on North-East Ulster writers, "because writers contain in their work the values of the future." He said that there never could be an Ulster Unionist literature, but he looked to the Protestants to emancipate it from local taboos. Mr. Ireland said that no great novel had ever been produced from Ulster, although Ulster had been exporting artists for the last fifty years, and in explanation of that he thought that the extroversion of Ulster and its writers lent itself particularly—or should — to journalism and autobiography.

Instancing Lynn Doyle's "An Ulster Childhood" as an example of autobiography, Mr. Ireland said that Anglo-Irish literature had a classicism, not found in English literature, which derived from its Gaelic background.

Mr. R. M. Smyllie, the final speaker at the Book Fair last night, was introduced by Mr. M. J. MacManus, Literary Editor of the Irish Press, who said that there was no man better qualified to talk about newspapers and their function in the national life. The subject of Mr. Smyllie's paper was "Recording the Present."

LORRY FALLS ON RAILWAY

The Great Northern Railway between Omagh and Dungannon was blocked for several hours yesterday afternoon in consequence of a heavy lorry crashing over a bridge between Carrickmore and Pomeroy stations and falling on the line many feet beneath. The lorry was badly smashed, and the driver, George Gardiner, Larne, received head injuries and was conveyed to Tyrone Hospital, Omagh. A breakdown gang from Belfast cleared the line in the evening and the train service was resumed.

THREE CHURCHES UNITE

To meet the challenge of "widespread apathy to religion and definite opposition to the Christian faith," representatives of the Church of England, the Roman Catholic Church and the Free Church Council have formed a Christian Council at Leicester, under the presidency of the Bishop of Leicester (Dr. Vernon Smith). The Council will make and receive suggestions. It is to be composed of ministers and lay people, ten from each of the three bodies.

MR. GANDHI SEES SIR S. CRIPPS

"LOOKED HAPPY," BUT WOULD NOT TALK

MR. GANDHI looked very happy after his interview with Sir Stafford Cripps in New Delhi yesterday, but the brightness on Mr. Gandhi's face as he emerged from Sir Stafford's drawingroom may not necessarily have been due to his reaction to the constitutional and political part of his two-hour interview.

Sir Stafford and Mr. Gandhi have so wide a field of common interest that the interview, which was longer than any that Sir Stafford has yet had with a single leader, was terminated only by the need to make room for the visitors next on the list. As he returned to Birla House, where he is staying, it was noticed that Mr. Gandhi wore a look of hushed concentration, and discouraged with a gesture of impatience any attempt to ask him questions.

As he and Sir Stafford came out, Mr. Gandhi, seeing the crowd of Pressmen remarked: "Look at the sharks." After a pause, he added: "I see you like them"; to which Sir Stafford retorted: "You like them more.' Answering one of the correspondents, Mr. Gandhi said: "I have taken my silence vow." Asked "Did you talk against the war?" Mr. Gandhi repeated that he had taken a vow of silence.

PROPOSALS FORECAST

Reliable forecasts of the proposals for India's future brought by Sir Stafford Cripps were stated yesterday to include the grant to India of the independence enjoyed by the other British Dominions, with the right to secede from the British Commonwealth. After the war, the forecasts said, the Provincial Legislatures would hold fresh elections, and their members would form a Constituent Assembly, which would draw up a Constitution for the Federation of India.

Should the decision of the Assembly be not acceptable to any province, the principle of self-determination will apply, and seceding provinces may set up a separate Dominion.

The Special Committee of Princes and Minsters which considered the proposals communicated by Sir Stafford Cripps will, it is believed, meet him to-day or to-morrow. The Moslem League Working Committee met early yesterday to hear Mr. Jinnah.

The interview fixed for yesterday evening between Sir Stafford and Sir Sikandar Hyat Khan, Premier of the Punjab, has been postponed.—(Reuter.)

TO SEE CRIPPS AGAIN

After discussion at last night's session of the Working Committee of the Moslem League it was decided that Mr Jinnah should see Sir Stafford Cripps again. Accordingly he will have a further interview with Sir Stafford to-day, after which the Working Committee will meet again.

Representatives of the Sikh All Parties Conference will place the British proposals before a meeting of the Conference's Working Committee to-day.

Sir Stafford Cripps is giving a Press conference at 9 o'clock this morning.—(Reuter.)

RAIDS AND PATROLS IN LIBYA

AXIS FORCES BEING STRENGTHENED

"Our patrols have again been active in Libya," says the British Middle East war communiqué. During Wednesday night casualties were inflicted on the enemy in a fortified post at Halegh-el-Eleba, between Mechile and Tmimi, about 40 miles from the nearest point in our advance positions.

"During an air raid on Tobruk on Thursday two German 'planes were damaged by our anti-aircraft fire, and one of these was later seen to crash into the sea. An Italian aircraft was shot down by one of our patrols."

"In Cyrenaica our bombers raided, among other places, the aerodrome of Martuba," said the Royal Air Force Middle East communiqué.

"During the afternoon of Thursday, March 26, the enemy raided Tobruk. One Junkers 87 was shot down by anti-aircraft fire, the aircraft crashing into the sea north of Gazala. An S79 was shot down by ground fire in the forward area. Two of our fighters are missing."—(Press Association.)

CAIRO, Friday.—There is no doubt at all that Marshal Rommel, who is said to have lost at least half of his forces in the recent Libyan campaign, is rebuilding those forces, it is stated in Cairo. What still remains problematical is how fast he is succeeding in doing this. In addition to seaborne reinforcements, there are also those brought by the trans-Mediterranean air ferry service supplying his forces. The proportion of Italians to Germans in the Axis forces is believed to be the same as at the start of the campaign—namely, two Italians to one German.

The existence of the "Long-Range Desert Group," a self-contained motorised patrol, which has been operating miles across the desert behind the Axis lines, may now be disclosed. One of this group's most outstanding exploits was a raid on Sirte aerodrome, some weeks ago, when 37 Axis 'planes were destroyed and 15 damaged.—(Reuter.)

ITALIAN COMMANDER'S TOUR

ROME, Friday.—General Enrico Bastico, Commander-in-Chief, Italian forces in North Africa, has carried out an extensive tour of the Italo-German positions in Cyrenaica, says Rome Radio.—(Reuter.)

TWO NEW PEERS

The King has approved that a Viscounty of the United Kingdom be conferred upon Captain David Margesson, M.C., M.P., former Secretary of State for War, and that a Barony be conferred upon Lieut.-Colonel J. T. C. Moore-Brabazon, M.C., M.P., former Minister of Aircraft Production, and son of Lieut.-Colonel J. A. H. Moore-Brabazon, of Tara Hall, Co. Meath.

LEASE-LEND AID FOR MEXICO

WASHINGTON, Friday.—Mexico and the United States have signed a lease-lend agreement. The agreement—a further step to co-ordinate Mexican and U.S. military co-operation—was signed by Mr. Sumner Welles, U.S. Assistant-Secretary of State, and Señor Najera, Mexican Ambassador. The latter said it involved a "substantial amount." Four days ago the Mexican-U.S. Military Commission began consideration of problems of mutual defence, particularly on the Pacific coast and around the Caribbean.—(Reuter.)

GREAT OFFENSIVES THIS SUMMER

FATE OF ALLIES AND AXIS IN THE BALANCE

—GENERAL SMUTS

IF Germany fails to eliminate Russia from the war this summer, she will be faced with final ruin, declared General Smuts, in a broadcast to the nation, at Johannesburg yesterday.

Japan, he said, despite her rapid successes, has so far achieved "nothing really vital to the issue of the war." Her decision to challenge both America and the British Empire would later be looked upon as a "curiosity of national policy, and the greatest act of national folly which history has had to record."

EAST AND WEST DRIVES

"What has happened in Dutch East Indies is, indeed, one of the worst tragedies of history. We need no further proof of the dangers threatening mankind. These crimes cry to heaven for restitution and punishment before the high court of history, and they will get it, too. Grievous as the blow in the Far East has been, it is also true that only the outer defences have been taken. The main positions in India, the Indian Ocean and Australia still remain."

He envisaged this summer a German offensive eastwards and a Japanese offensive westwards. For the British Empire and Commonwealth the principal battlegrounds would probably be the Middle East, India and the Indian Ocean. The prizes held out for such a convergent move by Germany and Japan are enormous. If successful, the move might mean a very dangerous turn of the war for the Allies. In embarking on such a convergent advance the aggressors would, however, have to consider two more important factors, which might entirely upset their plans. They would, each of them, have a most formidable enemy on their flank. Germany would have Russia on her left flank; Japan would have America on hers in the Pacific. This partly accounts for the desperate efforts Germany has been making, and will continue to make, to eliminate Russia from the war. If she fails in this, not only will her plans for the Middle East—and oil—be frustrated, but she will be faced with final ruin.

ON TWO FRONTS

"The attack on the Middle East, therefore, will be preceded by or will synchronise with another gigantic onslaught on Russia this summer. If it fails, Germany fails finally — if it succeeds, a grandiose march across the Middle East towards India still remains on her programme. An attack on both fronts this spring and summer may be looked upon as a certainty, and Germany will put all her available resources into it. So must we." Japan's position, however great her immediate success, was one of extreme vulnerability.

If Australia became a great sea and land base for America and Japan ventured further afield into the Indian Ocean, her very lifelines would be in danger. But the occupation of Australia would be a large and very serious affair—almost certainly beyond the strength of Japan, if America comes speedily to Australia's assistance, as she will. America will not let General Macarthur, her most brilliant soldier, down. Besides, the American Navy is burning to avenge the insult and treachery of Pearl Harbour.

JAPAN'S DECISION

"Japan is, no doubt, in a great dilemma. Her present move against Australia may be only a feint—India and Ceylon may be the real objectives. But in that case her doom is being sealed by the building up of America's overwhelming strength on land, sea and air in Australia and the surrounding waters; and the certainty of an eventual devastating attack from there. The next month or two will see what decision Japan will come to. But whatever her decision her ultimate fate is certain. Japan's decision to challenge both America and the British Empire will later be looked upon as a curiosity of national policy, and the greatest act of national folly which history has had to record.

"For the world it is perhaps better so. If there is to be a showdown for aggression let it be world-wide, and let Japan take her own medicine. So at last the frontiers of freedom will be extended over the whole world, and mankind will have a chance to breathe freely again. The master nations will have to take their equal place alongside their intended victims in a larger comity of nations, and the means of aggression will forever be taken out of their hands. For the Allies the issue is even more serious, for if they lose the war they lose life itself, and their Axis victors will carve them up and divide them as war loot."—(Reuter.)

SECOND ATTEMPT ON MARCEL DEAT

BOMB "BOUNCED OFF HIS WAISTCOAT"

Friday.—A second attempt on the life of Marcel Deat, who was wounded in the Versailles shooting last August, took place in the Municipal Theatre at Tours. According to the Vichy News Agency, the bomb thrown from the gallery, with the fuse alight, fell so near to Deat that part of his clothing caught fire.

A Berlin report says that the bomb was thrown as Deat was speaking, and that it "bounced off his waistcoat" on to the floor. Deat picked up the bomb, extinguished the fuse, and continued his speech. Several arrests were made.—(Reuter.)

Joint Stock Should Win at Naas

THE mixed programme arranged for Naas should provide an entertaining afternoon's sport. On his running at the last meeting, when he was beaten only a neck by Heirdom, Joint Stock looks to hold an outstanding chance in the Kildare Steeplechase, and Corn Prince must take a lot of beating in the Hunters' Steeplechase.

Tote Double on Fourth and Fifth Races.

The majority of the two years old declared for the Kingsfurze Plate will be making a first appearance, and nothing is known of their capabilities. Neartic, who is trained in R. Fetherstonhaugh's stable, which is in form at present, may be the best to stand. Selections:—

BALLYCAHILL'S DOUBLE AT KILL HILL

The Kildare Hunt Sportsman's Races were held yesterday at Kill Hill over a fine galloping course laid out by Mr. T. F. Meagher. Mrs. K. Urquhart's Ballycahill, who had won at the South County Dublin Harriers' meet at Jobstown, was saddled for both the first and last races, and, ridden by Mr. K. Urquhart, he won both in easy style. BABY FOOD

Baby foods are likely to become scarce, unless a quota system of some sort is soon brought into force by the Government. Some manufacturers have no barley, others have no flakemeal.

Following a conference which was held some time ago between the manufacturers and the Department of Supplies, the Irish Times published a brief report on the position under the heading: "Baby Food Safe."

"But is it safe now?" quieried one manufacturer yesterday. "Due to my foresight, I was able to purchase large enough stocks of flakemeal to carry on for another few weeks. When that stock is gone, I come to a standstill. Where are the allocation licences which we were promised at the conference?"

STOCK MARKET REPORTS

DUBLIN EXCHANGE

Markets finished the week on the Dublin Stock Exchange yesterday with a somewhat busier appearance, and local issues showed a slightly harder trend. British Industrials remained quiet and dull for choice.

Chief interest centred in the Gilt-edged groups, and especially in Home Government Funds. The Second National Loan lost 10/-, but Exchequer Bonds tended higher, and Land Bond issues displayed renewed firmness.

British Funds presented an easier appearance, and 3½ p.c. War Loan dipped to 105¾. Bank of Ireland Stock lost 10/- at 305½, but Nationals and Provincial Old were pence higher.

Guinness Units enjoyed quiet support, and improved to 86/-. Cairnes Ord. and Power Deb. both held steady. Cable and Wireless issues staged a good recovery.

Rails were busier than of late, and movements favoured holders. Great Southern Gtd. and Great Northern Deb. both registered gains of 10/-, while other issues held up well.

Dublin Transport Ord. and Alliance Gas Ord. held steady. Irish Sugar Pref. and Stephen's Green Cinema Ord. eased the turn, but Cement Pref. rose to 22/-.

Imperial Tobaccos weakened a further 1/3 to 122/9. Shell Transport Ord. quoted 39/4½, and Kern Oil Ord. 3/9¾.

LONDON FEATURES

Mr. Churchill's statement in the House of Commons on Thursday had a quietening influence on London Stock Markets yesterday. This, coupled with the developments in the Far East and the usual precautionary measures before the week-end, resulted in rather a tame market. Gilt-edged Stocks continued strong, and Old Consols, Conversion Fives, and War Loan 3 p.c. were all 1/16 up. Irish Free State Land Bonds added ½.

British Rails continued to attract support, and several issues finished with good gains. Southern 5 p.c. Pref. was 1 better at 111½. Further advance in South American Rails was indicative of the continued interest in this market.

The outstanding feature in the Industrial market was the sharp upward movement in Cable and Wireless issues, the Ord. being up to 52, and the 5½ p.c. Pref. putting on 2½ at 93½. Some demand was forthcoming for Breweries, and Bass and Distillers hardened, but Guinness and Watney both remained unchanged. Tobaccos were uncertain. B.A.T. lost 1/3, but Imperials gained 1/32. Carreras were another to lose fractionally. Among those Industrials to improve on the day were Coats, Imperial Chemical, Dunlop Rubber, Fine Spinners and General Electric. Building issues were mostly on the down grade. Steel Shares were inclined to be good, and some Shipping issues tended upward.

Cape influence again made itself felt in the Mining market, this time for the worse, and movements in every section were on the down grade.

The Treasury ruling on E.P.T. in regard to Malay Rubber Companies caused renewed enquiry by speculators, and again prices were inclined to be better, without any outstanding gain being registered.

Burmah, Mexican Eagle and "Shells" led a further retreat in Oils, virtually the only bright feature being Leaseholds, which had a slight gain.

WALL STREET

The Stock Market opened irregular and quiet. The war news still lacked speculative or investment inspiration, and, while fractional changes either way were the rule during the morning several issues declined a point or so in sluggish dealings.

The early attempts at a recovery met with a poor response, and the general direction was soon downward. Declines ranged from fractions to more than two points, and the market closed easier.

The turnover of 313,000 shares comprised 692 issues, of which 110 were higher, 409 were lower, and 173 were unchanged —(Reuter.)

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

PRIVATE MOTORING

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—According to Press reports, all private motor cars are to be forbidden to use the roads after May 1st, with certain professional exceptions.

I am venturing to suggest that this as a very arbitrary and unfair decision.

We are told that the reason for this Order is to stop transactions on the Black Market — whatever that may mean. Among the mass of private motorists, it would be interesting to know what percentage have been accustomed to augment their supply by this means. Personally, if I was so minded, I have no idea how I should set about getting any more than my rationed allowance, and I am sure 90 per cent. of private motorists would be equally ignorant. Why, therefore, should so many be penalised for so few?

But of the above 90 per cent. there must be many who have licensed their cars for the whole of the current year, partly in order to keep the road men employed, and have denied themselves much mileage during the past months in order to put by, perhaps, two or three gallons a month against a rainy day out of their legally acquired petrol allowance, and it seems grossly unfair that such thrifty people should not be allowed to use what they have saved until this amount is automatically expended.

In my own case, as in many others, this saved petrol would only be used to connect up our homes with the nearest 'bus or train service.

Elderly people cannot walk miles on a wet day, loaded up with parcels, to and from their nearest public conveyance, and their own motor car is the only conveyance they have to achieve this end.

I hope these points may be at least considered by the authorities before arriving at a definite decision.—Yours, etc.,

POWERSCOURT, Vice-President,
Royal Irish Automobile Club.
Powerscourt, Enniskerry,
March 27th, 1942.

Sailing Ship Fleet

Representatives of Irish shipping interests said last night that, while they were still interested in the proposal, the prospect of gathering a fleet of Irish sailing ships was not very bright.

It will be remembered that at a meeting of the Cork Chamber of Commerce it was proposed that boat craftsmen living in Cork should be organised in an industry to build sailing ships of from 1,500 to 2,000 tons. How far they have gone to implement the proposal has not been made known, but it is understood that there has been some difficulty about obtaining supplies of a suitably seasoned timber for the purpose. While the Corkmen were working along those lines a Dublin firm actually had chartered six or seven sailing vessels in America, but, owing to many difficulties, it was not possible to put them into commission.

Should conditions change in America, however, the ships will put to sea as soon as possible.

CENTRAL BANK CRITICS

At the meeting of the Council of the National Agricultural and Industrial Development Association, in Dublin yesterday, it was decided that the Central Bank Bill was quite worthless as far as making the financial system independent of foreign control.

There was comparatively little use made of electricity in this country because the farmer had not money to equip his farm, and the E.S.B. must earn interest on its capital and expenditure. A wisely-conducted State Bank would alter these limitations. The Dublin Corporation had decided to raise a loan at 4 per cent., and it was wrong to saddle the rents of houses with the payment of such interest and expect the people to pay the rents. Interest-free money was the only solution for the slum problem.

SALE OF PROPERTY

Nine lots were successfully sold by Albert MacArthur, "The Housefinder," at his auction salerooms. There was keen bidding for all lots, and the prices realised were satisfactory. The properties included 87 Hollybank road, Drumcondra; 79 Emmet road, Inchicore; 5 Nelson street, 1, 2, 3, 4 Myra Cottages, Inchicore; 4 Albert place, West, Charlemont street; 13 Lomond ave., Fairview; 10 Macken street, Pearse street; 2 Albert terrace, West, and 71-73 Bath avenue, Sandymount.

LONDON MONEY MARKET

Money was somewhat less abundant yesterday than during the earlier days of the week, but the supply was ample for the market's requirements, and the clearing banks were again good buyers of bills.

At yesterday's Bill tender the market syndicate managed to increase its quota still further to 60 p.c. by means of increasing the bid to £99 15/. This had the result of reducing the rate of discount to an unremunerative level, but it will provide the market with an ample supply of the popular end-June maturities.

BITTEN BY DOG

Holding that plaintiff had failed to prove that a sheep dog which bit her on the lip was of a mischievous and fierce nature, and accustomed to bite mankind, Judge Shannon, in the Circuit Court, said he must dismiss an action by Miss Alice Philomena Kavanagh, Bangor road, Crumlin, a factory worker, against Miss Sally Stokes, of Mount Alexander Gorey, Co. Wexford, for injuries sustained when bitten by the dog during her holidays last August.

SATURDAY, MARCH 28, 1942.

South Africa's Part

In spite of his comparatively advanced age, General Jan Smuts, the South African leader, is one of the ablest statesmen in the British Commonwealth. He fought with distinction in the South African War on the side of the Boers; during the last Great War he rallied South African opinion in the cause of the Allies; and, when the present war broke out, he was chosen again to lead the Union of South Africa into the war against the "Axis" Powers. Younger men might have quailed at the task with which he was confronted. The South African people were divided on the question of neutrality. General Hertzog, once General Smuts's colleague and afterwards his political opponent, did his best to have the South African Government's decision to enter the war rescinded; and, when he failed, retired into private life. The separatist element, always fairly strong, took fresh heart when the political truce between the Smuts and the Hertzog parties came to an end, and, in certain parts of the Union, anti-British influences increased and multiplied. Jan Smuts, however, never wavered. From the date of the signing of the Peace of Vereeniging this old Boer chieftain took the view that unity in South Africa could be achieved—if it could be achieved at all—only within the framework of the British Commonwealth of Nations; and for the last forty years his whole energies have been directed towards that end. History will record the measure of his success or his failure. During the last war South Africans of all political parties fought on the Allied side. Their heroic stand at Delville Wood remains one of the epic incidents of that world upheaval; and General Hertzog's historic renunciation of his Republic aims was very largely a result of the bonds of unity that were forged on that occasion between Briton and Boer.

Since the outbreak of the present war, South African troops have played a big part in the fighting on the African continent. They were prominent in the campaign that led to the restoration of Haile Selassie as Emperor of Ethiopia and the elimination of Italian influence in North-East Africa. They also fought with conspicuous heroism, and suffered heavy losses in the various offensives and counter-offensives in the Western Desert. The South African armies have deserved well of the British Commonwealth, for which they have fought with gallantry and verve. The man who almost solely has been responsible for their participation is Jan Smuts, and it is to him that history will attribute the credit, or the blame. In these circumstances, the speech that was made by General Smuts in Johannesburg yesterday acquires additional interest and importance. He envisaged during the coming summer a great German offensive eastwards, and an equally great Japanese offensive westwards. For the British Commonwealth, he said, the chief battle-grounds probably would be the Middle East, India, and the Indian Ocean—all three regions in which South Africa has a particular interest. If these offensives should succeed, the war might take a very serious turn for the Allies; if they should fail, Germany would suffer final defeat. General Smuts himself seems to have no doubt regarding the ultimate issue. In his view, Japan's decision to challenge the combined might of the British Commonwealth and the United States will be registered by history as the "greatest act of national folly." On the other hand, if the Allies should chance to lose the war, the issue would be "even more serious"; for "their 'Axis' victors would carve them up and divide them as war loot."

The Japanese Thrust

The Japanese captured Rangoon, the capital of Burma, with unexpected ease. They are not finding it so easy to overrun the rest of the country. At present their forces, thrusting northwards from Rangoon, are halted in the neighbourhood of Toungoo, approximately a hundred miles further inland, where they are opposed by mixed forces of British and Chinese. The British are fighting for the safety of Burma itself; the Chinese are concerned essentially with the preservation of the Burma Road to their capital, Chungking or of some alternative "life-line" whereby supplies can reach them from the outside world. Reinforcements have reached Toungoo from China, and the town will not fall without fierce resistance; but the Japanese also have taken care to increase their strength, and the situation is described as serious. Meanwhile, little or no advance has been made towards the invasion of Australia—if, indeed, the Japanese really mean to invade her, and are not merely practising a feint, as General Smuts suggested at Johannesburg yesterday. They still are deep in the toils of the unfamiliar, unmapped, unexplored territory of New Guinea, from which there has been little or no news of significance for some time past. Australia is taking no chances, but is putting herself into a condition of defence with all possible speed. General Sir Thomas Blamey, who has been appointed Commander-in Chief of the Allied land forces there, speaks with confidence of her ability to offer a prolonged and effective resistance, but does not suggest for a moment that the Commonwealth's ordeal will not be a severe one. "You have a tough time ahead," he says, warning the men under his command that they must prepare for invasion. Any speculation would be idle, just as most speculation in regard to this war has been idle hitherto. The wisest man is he who declines to pontificate. Who would have said that the Japanese would have found themselves masters of Hong Kong—let alone of Singapore—that they would have dared to strike at the Hawaiian Islands, or, for that matter, that they would have dared, after four years of war with China, to challenge the combined might of Great Britain and the United States? Yet there they are, and all the signs are that they contemplate an attempt at either India or Australia, if not both. The Allies may depreciate the importance of this Japanese menace—and, eventually, it is certain that victory and defeat will be decided in Europe—but the fact remains that it has made an enormous difference both to the duration and to the character of the one-time European war. Mr. Churchill is under no delusions concerning Japan's intervention. He declines to overlook the fact that "a third Great Power, armed to the teeth, with a population of eighty millions and three or four millions of trained soldiers . . . . with a powerful, efficient navy and air force," has thrown its weight into the balance. Yet he does not despair. He relies on the fact that, in the long run, the combined man-power and resources of Britain, Russia, the United States and China are bound to tell. The object of those formidable Allies is to insure that there will be a long run. That of the "Axis" trinity is to see that its blows are immediate and crippling.

Gold

For hundreds of years gold has been the symbol and the standard for everything that is most valuable to mankind. Why this comparatively useless metal should have acquired such a high value baffles the man-in-the-street; for it is a part of the mystery of finance, which is a closed book to everybody but the initiated. There is little wonder that plain people who look into the modern system of finance find much to perplex them; it is only natural that they should fail to understand why gold should be necessary to back currency when the gold itself has no value apart from the currency that it is backing; that they should wonder what essential difference it would make to the world if all the gold in it should be thrown into the sea; that they should ponder, like the young American woman in a film at present being shown in Dublin, on the fact that mankind spends years of toil and labour digging the gold out of the earth only to collect it into neat little piles, lock it up in a safe, and deposit it back in the earth again. In spite of all these doubts, however, most people would exchange anything in the world for gold, and in war-time, more than at any other time, they would prefer to retain their savings in gold rather than in currency; for gold, it was thought, never lost value. This war, however, has changed even the value of gold, and in future the phrase, "worth its weight in aluminium alloy," probably will take the place of the old familiar phrase. According to a report in the Manchester Guardian, it was announced recently that gold-mining in Australia probably will cease altogether before very long, because gold cannot be used for the manufacture of guns, and such base metals as lead, tin, and manganese ore are required a great deal more urgently than gold. At present there is only one buyer for gold in the world, the Washington Treasury, and gold is by no means the scarcest metal in the United States of America. Australia's annual output of gold, which amounts to no less than £12,000,000, probably is more than the world requires at present. This is a utilitarian age; the only things which count are guns and food, and gold is of no value for either purpose.

LONDON LETTER

59 FLEET STREET, LONDON,
FRIDAY NIGHT.

MR. DAVID KELLY, who has been appointed British Ambassador in Buenos Aires at the age of fifty, is son of the late Mr. David Frederick Kelly, of Trinity College, Dublin, and Clare College, Cambridge. Entering the Foreign Office in 1914, his early career was interrupted by war service, and he did not enter the Diplomatic Service proper until 1919. Mr. Kelly's first appointment was to the Argentinian capital. He now completes a circle which has run through Lisbon, Mexico, Brussels, Stockholm, Cairo and Berne. He was Minister (Lower Rank) in Egypt during the rather anxious period of 1937, and was promoted to the rank of Counsellor at the Foreign Office in London in 1938. In Brussels, Mr. Kelly married for the second time. His wife, the Countess de Vaux, is a vivacious lady who has been of the greatest help to him in his social duties.

Honey Prices Controlled

Lord Woolton has made a new Order, which comes into force on Sunday, replacing the existing Honey Maximum Price Order. The provisions of the new Order are substantially the same, but maximum prices are now prescribed for honey sold in the honeycomb and for imported honey sold under a licence. Honey from Eire is placed in the same category as home-produced honey. The price of ½lb. container of home-produced honey is reduced from 1s. 8d. to 1s. 6d. for ordinary honey and from 2s. to 1s. 10d. for heather honey. Home-produced honey in the honeycomb other than heather honey will be 2d. an ounce, and home-produced heather honey in the honeycomb 2½d. The Ministry of Food also announces new maximums for nuts and nut kernels. Canned sardines fixed maximums are also announced.

New Absentee Order

Mr. Bevin made an important Order to-day relating to absenteeism, and persistent lateness, which will operate from Thursday next. Hitherto absence or persistent lateness on the part of workers in scheduled undertakings has not been a direct offence under the Defence Regulations. The procedure in operation up to the present was not an effective one, because it did not deal promptly with serious offenders. The amending Order to-day makes it an offence for a person either to absent himself from work or to be persistently late, unless in either case he has reasonable excuse. Persons carrying on scheduled undertakings must now keep records relating to absenteeism, and officials of appropriate trade unions must be given access to these records. Where there is in the undertaking a works' committee or other joint council which can appropriately deal with the problem the case must be referred to that committee before the National Service officer decides to take proceedings.

Toll of the Road

The Ministry of War transports return to-night of the number of persons killed and injured as a result of road accident in Great Britain during February reveals that 510 people were killed and 7,745 injured; last year 179 more people lost their lives during the same period. 249 people were killed last month during the "black-out," and 261 during the day. Pedestrians over fifteen accounted for exactly half the deaths last month, while pedal cyclists (69) were the next highest class. Twenty-two drivers of mechanically-propelled vehicles were killed, and thirty-eight motor cyclists.

London "Potheen"

An Irish-Newfoundlander, it was revealed to-day, has become the first victim of the London "hooch" racket, while another man whose symptoms of wood or methyl-alcohol poisoning were less severe will be an invalid for the rest of his life. The dead man was victim of the "bootleg" liquid racketeers who are making big profits because of the shortage of genuine whiskey and gin. Most of the "bootleg" liquor sold in the West End is made from methylated spirits. Sealed in proprietary brand bottles, it is sold in low-class night clubs at which the first two or three drinks supplied are genuine. When their influence begins to take effect "hooch" is sold. "Hooch" made from methylated is more harmful than the raw wood alcohol which killed thousands of people during the Prohibition years in the United States.

Employment of Women

Women over thirty are permitted to secure employment direct and not through an Employment Exchange as hitherto in a special direction announced by the Ministry of Labour to-night. The registrations of women over thirty have shown that a very high proportion are married and engaged on household duties. In the 1909 class, for example, 220,000 out of 280,000 were married, and of that number only 52,700 were in full time paid employment. In the 1907 class, out of 290,000, 232,000 were married, and only 51,000 were in full time paid employment.

AN IRISHMAN'S DIARY

Another Battle of Clontarf?

With Australia looming so large in the current war-news, the possibility of another Battle of Clontarf may be considered.

Surely, we cannot have forgotten that Dublin folk among the settlers who helped in laying the foundation of the Commonwealth gave the name of their own northern suburb to a little district on what is now Sydney harbour. The name survives, and at present describes a neighbourhood which, by all accounts, resembles the original Clontarf.

In the United States there are two places so called—one in Wisconsin, the other in Minnesota—whilst Canada also has its Clontarf. The choice of name in these cases has, likewise, been due to the influence of Dublin exiles.

In fact the motive which inspired the naming of our own Clontarf would appear to have actuated that of the Minnesota townlet. "Cluain-Tarbh," the "Plain of the Bull," was chosen in the Dublin instance because the noise of the sea roaring across the coast-line seemed like the bellowing of a bull. Such, too, was the effect upon the ears of the first modern dwellers of the wind across the Minnesota plains.

A Charming Clock

One of the most fascinating of hobbies is the collecting of clocks. With some it amounts almost to a mania. I have visited homes of such collectors, which sounded at mid-day as if a carrillon were being sounded when the whole collection chimed the hour at the same time.

These thoughts are prompted by the sight of a really rare collector's item, which goes under the hammer at Battersby's fine art sale next Tuesday. This is a fine example of the craftsmanship of the first French Empire, and is exquisitely wrought in ormolu as heavy as gold, the face being supported on tall, elegant pillars, and the surrounding design being of surpassingly delicate beauty. To my surprise, I found it mechanically perfect, having to be re-wound only every eight days.

It was an heirloom in a Dublin family, to which it was originally given as a wedding present by an eminent collector. As the mellow chime rang out, I was carried in imagination back to a far period of gallantry.

"A Musical Record"

Mr. W. S. Greig, of the Abbey Presbyterian Church, writes:—

As regards your "A Musical Record," may I be permitted to draw your attention to, at least, an equally impressive musical record by the choir of Abbey Presbyterian Church, Dublin? This choir is, also, entirely voluntary.

Since I became organist and choirmaster, eleven years ago, the choir has given "The Mount of Olives" (Beethoven), "The Light of Life" (Elgar), "Stabat Mater" (Rossini), "The Redemption" (Gounod), "The St. Mark Passion" (Charles Wood), "The Seven Last Words" (Haydn), "Hymn of Praise" (Mendelssohn), "The St. Luke Passion" (J. S. Bach), "The Creation" (Haydn), and "The Messiah" (Handel).

"The Creation" has been given five times, "The Mount of Olives" and "St. Mark Passion" twice each. On Monday evening next, to celebrate the Handel bi-centenary, "The Messiah," Part II., will be given in its entirety.

I have always lamented the fact that Dublin choirs give the same one or two oratorios year in year out, and those, generally, ones of inferior musical worth.

I have endeavoured, with my choir, to give the best music, and also to give as much variety as possible.

"Where Stars Walk"

Hilton Edwards and Micheal MacLiammoir are ending their spring season at the Gaiety next week with a revival of the latter's popular comedy, "Where Stars Walk." It is an appropriate coincidence that this play should always happen to be presented in the spring, for the play itself seems to contain the essence of that season. It is full of the smell of hawthorn, the atmosphere of May eve, the old stories of Tir-na-nOg, even the lovely Botticelli painting which I remember as decorating the set—they all seem just right for the spring. And yet Micheal tells me that they never plan the play's production for that time. It just happens that when spring arrives they automatically think of "Where Stars Walk."

When the play ends on Saturday night the company pack up and set off for Limerick, where they will open on Easter Monday for a week's visit. I hear that they had planned quite a long tour this year, but the transport difficulties have been so great that they have finally decided on a fairly long visit to Cork after Limerick and then a week in Sligo—the first visit the company has ever made to Sligo.

BIG I.T.A. ADVERTISING SCHEME

A comprehensive publicity scheme—including Press advertising on an increased scale—has been approved by the Irish Tourist Association. Meeting in Dublin, the directors decided to urge the public to arrange holidays during the early months of the summer to avoid pressure on restricted transport facilities. It was agreed also to ask industrial concerns to "stagger" workers' holidays over the period May to September.

A deputation from the association has urged on the Minister for Industry and Commerce that if centralisation of racing has to be carried out it would be more equitable to authorise meetings on a grouping system by counties or regions—as such a scheme would be the least injurious to various interests in the areas concerned.

BACH'S "ST. JOHN"

Beautifully devotional was the presentation at the Methodist Centenary Church, St. Stephen's Green, Dublin, last night of Bach's Oratorio of "The Passion of Our Lord" according to St. John. As the Evangelist, William F. Watt sang with a commanding sense of the dramatic. His words were clear and given with a grand declamatory power. Marion Davies, Mervyn Bell, Brian Boydell and Alexander Roberts were the other soloists, and they carried their rôles well. Sylvia Fannin read the work admirably, and got a lot from her singers; her tempo, especially in the chorales, was always in artistic keeping with the words. Dr. Havelock Nelson was at the organ, and Alice Yoakley at the piano.

Solo on Gabriel's Trumpet

A Short Story by Frank O'Connor

IN a quiet road on the north side of Cork you will find an old shed, at one time a stable attached to some big house, with double doors that have dusty old glass frames fitted on top. There is a faded facia board above it that says—"Chas. Daly, Builder and Carpenter." Now there is no Chas. Daly and no carpentry either, but I remember the days when the two doors were flung wide on to the street, and an enormous carpenter's bench stretched down the middle of the shed, and the whitewashed walls were lined with planks. And there you could see Chas., or Cha (for no one called him anything else), and for the matter of that you could spend the best part of a day with him, since he wasn't what you'd call either a busy or an enterprising man. He didn't need to be; he had no one in the world only an old sister he was cracked about, and he looked on work as all intelligent men have looked on it since the beginning of the world: as an unmannerly interruption of the great business of living. He was a tall man, with a broad and battered old face, like a butcher's block, and a nose like a cabbage. He wore a pair of tin spectacles very far down his nose, and spoke to you in a melancholy, husky, drouthy sort of voice; a beery nose and a beery voice. He was nearly bald, but for a couple of wisps of grey hair which he lovingly trained to fall over his ears and down the back of his neck, as though inviting you to tell him he needed a haircut. He looked like a man that had a bad time of it. One time his eye would be shut—another his mouth would be twisted up towards his ear. I think it was himself who told me he had a bad stomach. He must have had; for he was for ever grousing, and, to judge by the things he said, half his efforts as a tradesman were wasted on dodging work.

Cha's great passion was music; an old melomaniac, like so many of his generation, he had studied most of the instruments in the orchestra. "Ah, if only I could get the time for it, man!" he would wail, screwing up his old face in agony. A few old British Army bandsmen used to drop in for a smoke and a chat, or for tuppence for a pint, as the occasion demanded, and that was really the best time to call—about four in the afternoon, when the sun was sloping over the convent wall and gilding the planks and the shavings, and out of the deep shadows at the back of the shed Cha would emerge, all glorious in shirt sleeves and apron, beating time and humming "Scenes that are Brightest," and the old bandsmen, mellowing in the sunlight, were recalling past triumphs and denouncing the Cork bands. "Look, Cha," Joe Dorgan would say, "they lay down the law about bands in this town, and they don't know what a band is. There's a few of us here could show them if only we had the chance."

"And why don't you?" Cha replied on one occasion, which deserves to be recorded. "What's to stop you?"

"Ah, sure we wouldn't have a chance," Joe Dorgan replied. "How would we? Poor devils like us, without the price of a drink?"

"A couple of old secondhand instruments to practise on," Cha said, reasonably. "What more do you want?"

And that was the beginning of the Irishtown Brass and Reed Band, which, no doubt, you've heard of. If you haven't, you should, for even in those days when there were bands it was remarkable. They took an old shed above a stable near the bridge; they worked at it night and day till they made it handsome; and long after dark, sometimes up to midnight, people passing home across the bridge would hear the music on the waters and look up and see the bandroom lights. Cha took on the recruits and licked them into shape for the bandmaster. He was a good teacher, though a bit contrairy. The boys would be practising "Reminiscences of Verdi," and all at once he would raise his two hands and stop them, while his battered old face grew contorted with misery. "Spare me!" he would wail. "Spare me! I think ye might as well give it up and go home. I don't know what possessed me. At my age I should have more sense." Then he would mooch over to the window with his hands in his trousers pockets and look down at the bridge, while all the boys stood there like fools. At last his face would begin to clear. He would look round, lower his head and stare at them over the rims of his tin spectacles. "There's an old woman in our terrace," he would say slowly. "Her name is Madge Moynihan. Some of ye may know her. From Macroom direction. They had a little farm there—nothing much, you know; a cow and a couple of pigs and a few chickens. Sorry I came, they call her. She's always talking about her young days. Here, show me that music!" Then he would scratch his head with one hand and beat time vaguely with the other. "Ah, 'tisn't so hard," he would say, by way of being surprised, and begin to hum to himself.

Home to our mountains, let us return, love.
There in thy young days peace
had its reign. . . .

"Isn't it beautiful?" he would say and his eyes swimming. "Beautiful! If only ye'd think of the chickens, ye'd get it right. The chickens are the thing that matters."

But whether it was Cha's temperament or Joe Dorgan's British Army discipline, the Irishtown Band, from being the laughing stock of Cork, became the best in Ireland. They won their first prize with a borrowed set of instruments, and then they went to Belfast with a set they couldn't pay for and walked away with the cup. Then the Italian Opera invited them to do the military band in "Faust," and the audience nearly went crazy when they saw the poor old Irishtown chancers in plumed hats. The opera had to be held up while they performed two selections. A wonderful night, and Cha never tired of talking about it. "Did I ever tell you about my operatic career?" he would say, pointing to a photo of himself in operatic costume; and go on with "Myself and Radotto were together one night—you know Radotto, the baritone—oh, a most charming fellow! We were having a pint in Brady's on the quay."

And then, after fifteen years of triumph, of competitions in Dublin and Belfast, of promenades in Killarney and Youghal, and joyous midnight returns from the station, waking the silent streets with music, there happened to the Irishtown band what happens to everything in Ireland—a Split. Not an ordinary split, with Cha Daly pulling one way and Joe Dorgan another, but a political split, between the O'Brienites and Redmondites, and while most of the band followed Redmond, Cha and one or two of the younger men were O'Brienites. It was a bad day for Cha's old shop. Men who used to spend half their day in it would go by without a look, and Cha would stare after them in mortification—a man that loved society; it cut him to the heart. "The sod!" he would mutter bitterly. "The sod!"

There was worse to follow. The Redmondites made up their minds to collar the band, and they called a meeting for a summer Sunday, after Mass. One of the big Redmondite backers, a publican called Alderman Grey, was sent along to ginger up the bandsmen in case they gave any trouble. Grey was a big, fat, greasy man, with a flower in his buttonhole and a face that was well-marbled with his own whiskey. There was no sign of Cha. He knew what they were up to.

"Well, boys," says Grey, in a voice like a vault, "ye all know the reason why this meeting was summoned. There's a disagreement in the Irish Party, and the gentlemen that supported this splendid band in its troubled days want to know what support the band is going to give them. I think I'm putting the matter fairly, Mr. Dorgan?" he says.

"Oh, very fair, very fair, indeed, Alderman," said Dorgan. "But you know the way we're situated."

"To be sure, to be sure, Mr. Dorgan, and 'tis only to see could I help ye to some agreement that I came at all."

"Old friends, Alderman," said Joe Dorgan, with a sigh. "Old friends—that's the trouble."

And then the door opened and Cha came in, looking more battered than ever. He gave one long look at Grey, as much as to ask what he was doing there, and then hung his old bowler on a hook inside the door.

"Good morning, Joe," he says at last, "since you won't say it yourself."

"What cheer, old flower!" says Joe.

But no one said anything else while Cha walked up to the fireplace and screwed up his eyes to look at the picture over the mantelpiece. They all knew what that was. It was the picture of the band that was taken in Belfast. Then Cha leant one arm on the mantelpiece and looked round at them over the old tin specs.

"I hear ye're going to split the old band?" he said in a joking voice.

"Oh, don't say that, Mr. Daly," said Grey, letting on to be shocked.

"I was laughing there to myself, coming up the stairs," said Cha in that maddening way he had. "Two men I knew at one time. . . . You knew them too, Joe, didn't you? Matty Harrison and Ned Shee? They used to live out Whitechurch way."

"Oh, I did, I did, Cha," said Dorgan, not knowing from Adam what the man was getting at.

"And do you remember," says Cha, with a grin, "that one of them had a trap and the other had a pony? And one time the Cork Park Races were on, they agreed to put the two together and go off to the races for the day. Well, I have to laugh when I think of it. They got as far as the pub by the Kerry Pike. By that time they had a bit of a thirst—'twas a warm sort of day, just like this. And over the drink they had some little falling out about politics. Matty pushed the trap home! He pushed it home sooner than give Shee the advantage of it! Ha, ha, ha!" There was a long pause while Cha stared at them all over the rims of his spectacles with a face like an undertaker. "Of course, neither of them ever got to the races," he said reasonably after a little while. There was another pause. Suddenly he scowled. "Good morning," he said, in a cold, stiff voice, and went for his hat.

"And is that the way we're going to part, Cha?" says Joe Dorgan to him, across his shoulder.

"Maybe you'd do me a favour," said Cha, stopping in his tracks.

"Anything I can do, I will," said Joe.

"That old instrument of mine," said Cha. "I'd be as jealous of it as a young fellow with his first doll."

"'Tis yours, Cha," says Joe, "and well you deserve it."

"Thanks, old man," said Cha. "We won't part in bad friends."

"Don't play it with Quarry Lane though," Joe Dorgan shouted after him. Cha was on the landing when he spoke. He stopped dead, with the old bowler still in his hand, and then he came back slowly with his head in the air.

"Ah, is that all you know about me, Joe?" he said jokingly. "After all our years together?"

"The way it is," said Joe, giving him a sly look, "I'm a bit jealous, too."

"Ah, go on!" said Cha. "Tell me, Joe," he said, "do you remember 'The Minstrel Boy'?"

"I played it often enough anyway," said Joe.

"And do you remember what he did with his harp, Joe?"

Joe started and looked up as though he couldn't quite believe it.

"You'd never do that, Cha?" he said.

"'The harp he loved never spoke again,'" said Cha, scratching his pate, "'for he tore its chords asunder.'"

"You're taking it badly, Cha," said Dorgan. "I'm surprised at you. Before ever you met any of us you were mad about music."

"Music!!" said Cha. "Music! What's music in a country like this? There's three or four fellows sitting on the bridge now," he went on, "waiting to dodge into Regan's for a pint. 'Tis very pleasant, of course; you have the noise of the river and the sunshine; you can see who's coming and going. We enjoyed it ourselves once. . . . I look round me and I think of all the hours we spent working on this old bandroom, all the nights we practised here, all the times we came back to it from our rambles. Now, we can go back to the bridge again. After fifteen years!"

"The man is right," says Shinkwin, the side-drummer, taking his pipe from his mouth.

"Sure I know he's right," shouted Joe Dorgan. "I know damn well he's right. Do you think 'tis I want to split the old band? Didn't I break my heart over it many a night? . . . You see how it is, Alderman," he said to Grey. "We're not like any band that ever was. Explain that to the other gentlemen, and leave us go our own way."

"No, Joe," said Cha, "that's not what I want. I don't want to make any trouble for ye. What can you do without backers?"

"We can do without them," shouted Joe. "We done it before."

"Oh, my, oh, my," boomed Grey, interrupting the discussion which wasn't going at all the way he planned, "that's a noble line of conduct. I hope you appreciate it, Mr. Daly?"

"'Tis more than I asked for," said Cha.

"'Tis on your account," said Grey, "they're ready to give up their own side, to take this great band into the wilderness again, sooner than ask you to make that sacrifice for them. Oh, Mr. Daly, I hope you won't allow them."

"But what can I do?" said Cha. "I can't change my convictions, can I?"

"No one is asking you to do that at all," said Grey. "All we ask you to do is stay on with the band, even though it does support Mr. Redmond. Or is that too much to ask of you?"

"God knows," said Cha, "I'd put my hand in the fire this minute for the sake of the band."

"Then show it, man," said Grey, laying his fat hand on Cha's shoulder, and staring him between the eyes. "For God's sake, show it. Be a man! Make this sacrifice for the sake of the band, and you'll never regret it."

"Oh, anything you like!" said Cha, and he turned away.

That was the sort he was. The old band was wife and child to him, and the more it did wrong the fonder he grew of it. Of course, he felt his position; it wasn't a very nice one, but when he had to attend a meeting and the Redmondite speakers began he slipped out of the crowd and into some pub, where he made a joke of it all. "Look at me!" he'd say, cocking his eye at you over his specs. "At my age! A traitor to my own side. I wonder any of ye drink with me at all!"

Then, a couple of years later, came the big Redmondite rally at Bantry. Cha was there. He took a few of the bandsmen down the coast road to look at the view of the bay with the mountains all round. When they returned to the square there were bruisers of both parties striding up and down with sticks in their hands, looking for fight. "There's going to be trouble here," Cha said, screwing up his eyes. "Ah, what matter?" said Shinkwin. "I think I'll give it up," Cha said miserably. "I'm getting too old. It upsets my nerves."

The bandsmen were drinking in the pub when the trouble began outside. Cha just gave one glance out and went on with what he was saying. Two of the men he was talking to finished their drinks and slipped away, and soon the pub was clear, all but one band-boy, called Connie Keohane. He was Cha's favourite pupil.

"Excuse me, Mr. Daly," the boy said, his face growing pale, "I don't like sitting here and my friends being killed outside."

"Ah, what are you talking about?" cried Cha, raising his hands in protest. "That's nothing but free drink and bad feeling. God above, don't I know it? What was I saying? Oh, about the Butter Exchange band."

"My father would never forgive me, Mr. Daly," said the boy.

"Now, leave that to me, can't you," said Cha, laying hold of him. "I'll tell your father. Can't you listen to me? That sort of work is no good to any man."

"For God's sake, Mr. Daly, let me go," cried the boy, trying to wrest himself away.

"Listen to me, I say," shouted Cha. "They'll make a wreck out of you the way they made a wreck of the country."

"I'd sooner that, anyway," the boy replied hotly, "than to be a bloody turncoat like you."

"Thanks, Connie," said Cha, dropping his arm and giving him a terrible look, "thanks. I well deserved that from you."

The boy gave him one wild glare before he, too, rushed out. Cha took up his cornet and stuffed it under his coat. He had only one idea—to get away from it all, down the coast road. He knew the boy was excited, that he didn't really mean it, but, still, it cut him to the heart. As he put his hand to the latch, he glanced out over the blind and the sight halted him. The square was packed with fighting men, swinging sticks and rolling over and over on the ground, while women and children ran screaming in all directions, and an old priest shouted from the platform, trying to make himself heard. "Almighty God," he muttered. And then, at last, so he said, he saw a great light. He stood on the footpath and raised the cornet to his mouth. Some men that were fighting turned and looked at him in astonishment. They thought he was mad. It was a big square, with a hollow echo, and Cha knocked it out of every stone till the music rolled back to him in waves and the crowd stood and looked at him. He played the "West's Asleep."

And long a proud and haughty race
Honoured and sentinelled the place,
Sing oh, not even their sons' disgrace
Can quite destroy their glory's trace.

It was queer, he used to say afterwards, to watch the effect, to see a stick fall here, a hat taken off there, a man draw himself to attention on the pavement, and the noise of the crowd dying away and dying away till there was nothing to be heard but the piercing trumpet tones. And when the last echoes died away the old priest cried, "And now, in God's name, let ye go quietly to yeer homes."

Cha took all the congratulation modestly. It was only outside the Bandon station, when they were lining up to play themselves home, that he grew fractious. "No, no," he said, waving his hand, "go on, the rest of ye! I'm going home to my bed. My last tune is played."

They all thought the fancy would wear off him, but he had spoken the truth. He never played again. As his way was, he treated it all as a great joke.

"Are ye serious?" he would say, lowering his head and gazing at them over the spectacles. "Is it me ye want to play in yeer measly brass band—me, a man that played a solo on Gabriel's trumpet!"

PROFUNDITY

BY PATRICK MacDONOGH.

THE famous tenor, turned psychologist,
Sleeks the coarse mane his shy sopranos toss,
Turns down fat thumbs, proclaims me "Lyricist!
And too well integrated to discuss
Art or the world or him with some degree,
Even the smallest, of profundity!"

Certainly I confess whatever thing
I say must pass my armed intelligence
And prove alliance with some kind of sense—
But then I'll say it if I have to swing!

And I am sure a man becomes profound
Who's watched his whitening fingers tighten round
Her dewy throat until his Lesbia dies,
Dies horribly before his changeless eyes,
His changeless unrepentant eyes that see
The baseless nadir of profundity.

The Queensberrys—"Remarkable People"

The Sporting Queensberrys. By the Tenth Marquess of Queensberry. London: Hutchinson. 15/- net.

THERE were two outstanding members of the Queensberry family—"Old Q," the fourth Duke; and the eighth Marquess, who wrote the famous rules for the conduct of "the noble art of self-defence."

The fourth Duke was one of the most enterprising of the eighteenth century bucks and blades who raced, gambled, loved and ruled England, all under a moral code of their own. He is part of the history of the Turf, as rider, owner, gambler, and foundation member of the Jockey Club. He also acquired fame for his amatory exploits, which continued till he was over 80 years of age, and surveyed the passing beauties through a telescope from his balcony, with a mounted groom in attendance to ride after any lovely that he desired to inspect at closer range.

The eighth Marquess is remembered chiefly for his boxing rules; but he also was noted for his campaign against Oscar Wilde. It is often forgotten that he was a noted rider, and was soured by the refusal of the mount on "Old Joe" in the 1886 Grand National. He managed to get rid of a great deal of his fortune, and the ninth Marquess got rid of the rest, so that the writer of this book depended upon the charity of friends and relations for his education and his chance to make a job for himself.

He has been very successful as a stockbroker, but reserves the telling of that story for a later occasion. His book is a fascinating history of his sporting ancestors, and of boxing itself. It is written in a peculiar way, with the first half of each chapter written about the Queensberrys and the second half about boxing, so that one's interest in one story is being constantly interrupted by a further section of an equally interesting second story.

The book must have a place in the libraries of those who like volumes on either boxing or racing, but it also is excellent general reading, dealing, as it does, with remarkable people, fit for the most outlandish novel.

In The Beginning

Primitive Scenes and Festivals. By Sacheverell Sitwell. London: Faber and Faber. 21/- net.

THE arrival of Sacheverell Sitwell's "Primitive Scenes and Festivals" filled me at once with delight and apprehension; delight because I knew how pleasant it would be to read, and apprehension because I knew how difficult it would be to review. What can one say about such a book? To summarise it would be impossible; to criticise it presumptuous; to ignore it unthinkable.

The subject-matter is so extensive and the style so condensed that even after a second reading one seems to have touched only the fringe of the matter. With this, as with all of Sacheverell Sitwell's books, I get the feeling that if I hid it away on a back shelf and re-read it every few months I should find something more to think about every time.

So far I have not said what the book is about. Essentially it is a series of exquisite little word-pictures of primitive rites and ceremonies. The author takes us with him into the past, to Stonehenge, to Avebury, to prehistoric Ireland, and further afield to Albania, Italy, and even North America. On each scene he raises the curtain of time a little and allows the reader to witness some strange primitive rite in all the wealth of detail which his words evoke.

Near the beginning of the book is a description of Aubade, the Morning Song to the Sun, a strange ritual sacrifice which used to take place at Avebury.

The whole festival comes to life before the startled eyes of the reader; he sees the Great Circle, a ring of monoliths casting long morning shadows over the spring grass; he observes the oddly-shaped altar stone and realises with deepening horror that the scooped rivulet on its flat surface is intended to drain off the blood; he follows the movements of the virgin as she is led to the sacrifice, and the actions of the priest as he raises a shining knife above her; he watches with fascination, while the priest removes the bleeding heart and holds it, quivering, in the morning light.

The picture could not be any more vivid if it were to happen before one's eyes in the cinema; indeed, in some peculiar manner it all seems to be familiar, and I found myself wondering, like J. B. Priestley, whether I had been here before.

Mr. Sitwell does not attempt any Freudian explanation of these rites and ceremonies; he is content to describe.

The book is plentifully illustrated with the most heterogenous collection of illustrations imaginable; all are perfectly reproduced, all depend in some way or another upon the text, and the subjects vary from a photograph of the Lion Gate at Mycenæ to a painting by Ludlow of five Blondinettes. The book has 283 pages of wonderful prewar paper, beautifully printed, and the binding would do credit to any publisher. There is a full index and the system of marking the top of each page with a heading which gives an indication of what is to be found in the page makes matters very much simpler for anybody seeking quotations or references.

I mention these sordid details merely as an attempted explanation of the fact that the book is retailed at the—to my mind—absurdly high price of one guinea a copy. It is a book which should be purchased rather than borrowed, but a guinea for one book, however good it may be, is a little "steep."

Escape From France

The Darkest Hour. By Leo Lania. London: Gollancz. 8/6 net.

ANY Irishman should enjoy this book, neutral or non-belligerent as he may be. It is an epic story of a man's escape from France to America; but it is not told as an epic; it is reported. Lania had already escaped from Austria.

He had settled down in Paris, and was working there when the war broke out. He reports a fashionable dinner-table conversation between Deputies of the Chamber, bankers, film producers, courtesans; then a few words from working men. Suddenly he finds himself locked in a stadium outside Paris, with every other "alien."

For days they are kept there, eating liver paste, trapped. Then they are let out, some of them, and he is just on the point of leaving for America when he is arrested a second time and sent to another camp—concentration would be as good a description as any—in the provinces. He is there for months; later they are transferred to Brittany—when the Germans break through.

He is just in the act of making his escape, with some others—with their French guards unwilling to shoot them—when the Germans arrive at the camp, and fire after them.

The remainder of the book deals with their walk, and bicycle trip from Brittany right down the east coast of France to unoccupied territory, and on to the Spanish border. It is, truly, an epic story; an adventure which no fiction could equal. But it is a pity it is just reported, casually, unemotionally. We have become too blunted, already.

HAD STOMACH PAINS FOR NINE YEARS

Spent a Small Fortune Seeking a Cure

Perhaps you have become discouraged in your search for something to stop stomach pains. Why not take a tip from this commercial traveller, who spent pounds seeking the right remedy. He writes:—

"As a commercial traveller, I am not used to writing long letters to manufacturers, but it would be wrong if I did not express my gratitude to you. I suffered from nervous gastric stomach for nine years. I spent a small fortune on remedies without result, and, at times, felt very depressed. I call on chemists, so I bought a small packet of Digestif Rennies from one of them, and was amazed at the result. I now take Rennies after every meal, and I have not felt that old pain since."
—K. P.

Digestif Rennies work in three ways. They contain antacids which neutralise acidity; absorbents which reduce stomach gas; and digestive ferments which actively aid digestion. Rennies dissolve in the mouth. They become active at once, because they reach your stomach full strength—not weakened with water.

DETECTIVES WHO WERE SHOT

COMPENSATION AWARDED IN RATHGAR CASE

The President of the High Court, Dublin, yesterday awarded £565 to Mrs. Kathleen Hyland, Errigall road, Dublin, in her claim under the Garda Siochana (Compensation) Act, 1941, for compensation for the death of her husband, Detective Richard Hyland, who was shot while on duty at a house at Rathgar road, Dublin, on August 16, 1940. He allowed her costs.

He awarded £400 to her son Peter, £358 to her daughter Mary Philomena, and £147, with costs, to Mrs. Mary Hyland, Maynooth the detective's mother.

The President awarded £500 compensation, with costs, to Mrs. Mary A. McKeown, Clea, Keady, County Armagh, for the death of her son, Detective Sergeant Patrick McKeown, bachelor, who was also shot while on duty on the same occasion.

Mr. Lavery, K.C., Mr. Roe, K.C., and Mr. Nugent (instructed by Mr. P. F. O'Reilly) appeared for the applicants; and Mr. Kevin Dixon, K.C., and Mr. Carroll O'Daly (instructed by the Chief State Solicitor) for the Minister for Finance.

SETTLEMENTS OF ACTIONS

Sums amounting to over £4,500 were awarded yesterday to persons who had been injured by motor vehicles or to the representatives of people who had lost their lives in motor accidents. The amount in each case had been settled between the plaintiff and the defendant, and the settlements were announced before the President of the High Court. The sums awarded in nine cases varied between £1,100 and £110.

In another case a woman whose husband was said to have died from the kick of a pony at the Connemara Pony Breeders' Society Show at Carna is to be paid £175.

REVERSED ON APPEAL

Judge Davitt in the Circuit Court, on appeal, reversed a sentence of three months' imprisonment imposed in the District Court on Peter V. McKenna, Waterton House, Palmerston, Co. Dublin, for driving a motor car at a speed dangerous to the public at Chapelizod on 2nd June last.

SHE HAD BLINDING HEADACHES

Tablets and Pills Had No Effect, But—

Kruschen Got at the Cause

This woman's headaches were of the black, blinding kind that reduce the sufferer to something like helplessness. She tried tablets. She tried pills. But the cause lay too deep for such treatment. Where they failed, Kruschen succeeded.

"I used to get frightful headaches," she writes. "The pain was terrible. No tablets or pills of any kind could cure them. One morning, casually, I tried Kruschen Salts in a glass of hot water. I continued taking it, but I have not had one of those awful headaches since. Kruschen suits me better than any other liver tonic. I find it very good."—(Mrs.) L.A.W.

Blinding headaches can nearly always be traced to the unsuspected retention in the system of stagnating waste material which poisons the blood. The six salts in Kruschen stimulate the internal organs to healthy, regular action so that no clogging waste is allowed to collect and contaminate the bloodstream. Your inside is kept clean and serene. Result — goodbye to headaches, to that sallow complexion, to that lack-lustre eye. Your system never "stales" to Kruschen Salts. There is never any need for increased doses. When your headaches are gone, the "little daily dose" is all you will ever need to keep you regular.

Kruschen Salts is obtainable of all Chemists. Price 1/9 per bottle.

After further bequests, she directed that the residue of her estate be divided equally amongst ten charitable institutions.
